Singapore to host inaugural Singapore International Arbitration Forum

Eminent practitioners in the international arbitration industry will gather in Singapore to discuss, debate and share insights on the future of international arbitration

Singapore, 23 November 2009 – Maxwell Chambers, Singapore's first dedicated and integrated dispute resolution centre will be hosting the inaugural Singapore International Arbitration Forum in January 2010 (SIAF 2010). Themed "The Future of International Arbitration", the forum will bring together some of the world's most respected arbitration practitioners and thinkers to share insights and provide thought leadership on the major issues facing the industry.

International arbitration has developed to be the preferred dispute resolution mechanism for transnational commercial transactions. While arbitration knowledge, practices and processes have grown in depth and sophistication to deal with the increasing complexity of the changing business landscape, there are still difficulties in enforcing arbitration awards across borders.

Mr Chelva R. Rajah SC, Chairman of Maxwell Chambers, said, "Arbitration is an important topic, especially as global markets struggle to find their footing in the midst of these tough economic times. SIAF 2010 provides the ideal platform for arbitral institutions, arbitrators, lawyers and other stakeholders to discuss and review the existing arbitral mechanisms and ethos to cope with the changing financial and market landscape that is inexorably different from what it used to be."

Maxwell Chambers is proud to co-organise SIAF 2010 with the Singapore International Arbitration Centre (SIAC), from 21 to 22 January 2010 at Raffles City Convention Centre, Singapore.

Professor Michael Pryles, Chairman of SIAC, said, "As the global business market begins adapting to the stabilising economic climate, SIAF 2010 is a timely herald for players in the international arbitration space to come together to consider the way forward in view of rising arbitral issues. We are very fortunate to be able to bring together impressive panels of global arbitration experts to share their insights on critical issues and update on the latest developments affecting our industry.”

Strong support from global arbitrators and lawyers

SIAF 2010 is supported by leading international arbitral institutions as well as prominent arbitrators and lawyers around the world. Our eminent speakers include Michael Pryles, Chairman, Singapore International Arbitration Centre (Singapore); Lawrence Boo, Head of Chambers, The Arbitration Chambers (Singapore); Sundaresh Menon, Arbitrator & Senior Counsel, Rajah & Tann (Singapore); Michael Moser, Chairman of the Hong Kong International Arbitration Centre; H.E. Judge Sir Christopher Greenwood CMG, International Court of Justice (The Hague); John Savage, Shearman & Sterling (USA); Vinayak P. Pradhan, Skrine (Malaysia); and Kevin Kim, Head, International Arbitration & Litigation Practice Group, Bae, Kim & Lee LLC (Republic of Korea).

(Please refer to factsheet for full list of supporting organisations and speakers for SIAF 2010)

These industry experts will lead the various discussions in eight plenary sessions on the following areas:

- Jurisprudence versus privacy: Has the time come for a body of international arbitration case law?
- Looking forward – Are the New York Convention and the Model Law adequate for meeting the challenges of the future?
- The role of the courts in support of the arbitration: Finding the right balance
- Enforcement of awards in Asia: What more can be done?
- Commercial Arbitrations Involving States: Special considerations
- Investment in arbitration: Perils and possibilities
- Innovative approaches to the conduct of arbitration
- The use of technology in aid of arbitration proceedings
